About the conference.

Workplace violence isn't just part of the job. Yet, far too often, workers face violent situations while performing their jobs or experience violence related to their employment. Violence doesn't just happen. It's a serious workplace hazard, and much more can be done to prevent violence in all of its forms and protect employees — including recognizing the effects of intimate partner violence in the workplace and how to support workers experiencing it. CUPE Saskatchewan's Health & Safety Conference 2020 will focus on providing resources and training to prevent violence in the workplace by addressing the underlying root causes and identifying the steps, process and actions that employers and health and safety committees can take to prevent violence.
